Hanson on the charge of murder, and the circumstances leading to the arrest as well as the details of the crime itself are very interesting. After a long lapse of years it seems as if the mystery will be at leading to the control of the diligent efforts made by the police, no clue could be obtained to the murder. The details of the crime were sensational to a degree, but the mystery was never penterated, and as the years passed by the crime passes out of men's minds and became as a talk that was told.

Perpetrator,

"Well, how long since you left hell?" he asked. At this question the medium said that she could not pretend to get satisfactory results from the invisible realms unless every body was en ropport with the occasion.

The gentleman then said: "If there is any one who would like to speak to me, all right." The writing on the slate was resumed, and the words, "I am Moore who died in 1874" were found written.

"How come you be died." "How came you to die?" asked the gentle-"I was murdered."
"Would you have any objection to giving me a full account of the murder?"

not large enough to satisfy his enlarged di-mensions as a swell. He accordingly be-thought himself of a nice little game. He "I don't want poor Lizzie hurt," was the esponse, "as she was actuated by avarice; but Joe ought to have had more sense and grati-tude, for I done a great deal for him."
"Who killed you?" named Gallina, and yesterday morning he took a train for Arkansas and crossed the "He did. I will assure you that one day ou shall know all about it." A TELL TALE LEFTER.

This information reached the ears of the Attorney-General, but of course he could make no use of it, but he resolved that he ould keep his eye open. The first link in the case was found several months ago. A litigation was then going on in which the widow of Moore and her brother were vitally nterested. Her brother got an idea in his head that she was not dealing fairly with him. He accordingly wrote her a letter in which be threatened that if she did not deal fairly with him he would show her up as she was. As this letter contained something else of a business nature she showed it to her attorney. It so happened that the brother was put upon the stand to testify, and a porwords excited some attention. They were

This fact, also, was taken to the Attorney General. Shortly afterward the brother of Mrs. Moore and his wife went to General Turner to have him draw up a deed for them. The Attorney General then ap-proached him about the matter, and he told up in Illinois, where he received a letter from Mrs. Moore telling him to come to Memphis. He did so, and she made a proposition to him to kill her husbanck. He did not want to do it, and, it is said, consulted her brother, who tried to dissuade him, and told him to go back to Illinois, and said Mrs. Moore would get him into trouble if he was not extended, within half a square of street cars, it must door.

On the night of the murder, according to this later version of the case, Mr. and Mrs. Moore were in bed. She was waiting to adstanding. At a given signal from him with-out she was to admit him. At the time of the murder the story ran that a man had come to the window of the house, and, seeing Moore in bed, had fired through, killing him, and had then disappeared in the darkness of the night. Suspicion at the time was attached to Mrs. Moore, as her statement of the s ments of the affair in some instances di verged from the truth. The revised edition of the case set forth that while husband and wife were in bed the signal came and Mrs Moore, getting out of bed, opened the door admitting Hanson, who, without any hesitation, shot Moore dead and left the room by THE WRONG MAN ARRESTED. The man arrested for the murder is proba ly fifty years of age, and it appears that he was the wrong man. He has a wife and grown daughter, and the Hanson who comnitted the crime is a much younger man. I s asserted that he is now dead, but informa tion has been obtained showing that he probably still alive and will soon be caugh For a long time a slight suspicion has been attached to Mrs. Moore, who is now Mrs. Smith, she having married since. She will probably be afforded a good chance to estab which implicates her so strongly, is to be atand it is highly probable that she has he

The Paw of the Law Placed on the linquent Corporation.

The failure of the waterworks to comply with their promises has at last come to the attention of Judge Horrigan, of the Criminal Court. There is no gainsaying the fact that Memphis is in a critical position. The yellow-fever season has been safely passed through, it is true, but nearly every house in the city has a fertile source of disease in the water-closet. The failure to supply water has rendered nearly every house in town fifthy and the water-closet system becomes

A few years ago an old Italian named Parroti kept a smart grocery and sample-room on the corner of Beale and Dosoto streets. He made a very nice fortune there and was a very solid Muldoon, and paid his debts promptly. When he died he left his property to an entirely differently constituted son, Ettie Parrotti. Now Ettie was desirous of being a sport, and so he began to spend money freely and paid assiduous attention to dames whose fame is none of the best. He was beginning to consider himself an awful swell, but the receipts at the grocery took wings more rapidly every day, and he has of late seen that they were not large enough to satisfy his enlarged di-
